

Play By the Rules

Thursday, 20 December 2012

December / January Edition, happy reading !! Information on recruitment, eating disorders and information on new on-line courses...

To round off 2012, we continue our article series on club recruitment and provide some tips on how to recruit the best people to your club. As parents and coaches it is important to be educated on how to recognise eating disorders and their warning signs, read our article which highlights the signs to look out for.

We highlight the Australian Sports Commission's new online courses: The Member Protection Information Officer (MPIO) course and Complaint Handling course, which are sure to provide essential information for all members of your sport. There are surveys on Equal Play and kiteboarder safety for you to add your views; new webinars and campaigns; and the winners from the Good Sports Awards and national multicultural awards.

It has been a fantastic year for Play by the Rules, in no small part due to the amazing support of our subscribers and the promotions by the many clubs, associations, SSOs and NSOs, and various government and non-government organisations around the country who we work with.

We also can't forget the vitally important assistance and support of our partner organisations, who promote our program and its activities so effectively through their own agencies and networks.

While progress has been made in helping to make sport safer, fairer and more inclusive this year, we understand that the key is to always be vigilant and persistent, to constantly educate on what is and isn't acceptable behaviour and to draw attention to these issues whenever they occur so that positive cultures are engrained and reinforced in sport.

We look forward to doing this with you all again in 2013!

All the best for the holiday season!!

The Play by the Rules team

Other Links

Play By the Rules - December - January edition

