

Coach Transition Appeals Process Update

Wednesday, 21 August 2013

Why appeal? How do I appeal? Are you a GFA coach without even knowing? Can I coach now?

The Coach Transition Appeals Process has been updated on the Gymnastics Australia website. The guidelines for transition and the evidence requested have been streamlined and simplified. The deadline to appeal your provisional accreditation is 31st December 2013.

Why appeal?

You should appeal if:

You believe the provisional accreditation you have been assigned does not reflect your level of competence.

The provisional accreditation that you have received does not allow you to coach athletes that you currently coach.

How do I appeal?

You appeal by completing the application form which is available on the Coach Transition Appeals page of the GA website and submitting the application form along with evidence to GA.

Are you a GFA coach without a GFA accreditation?

A GFA coach without a GFA accreditation for the new Coaching Framework is able to apply through the appeals process for the accreditation. Please note that this is only for coaches who already have an accreditation and can prove that they are actually coaching GFA.

Please complete the GFA application form available on the website. At the end of the application form you will find criteria specific for GFA.

Can I coach now?

Please be assured that you are able to coach as usual at this time per your accreditation as a Level 1, 2 or 3 Coach and remain covered by GA's National Insurance Program. All current accreditations will be valid to at least the end of 2013 and effective dates for the new accreditation levels will be set soon.
